TITLE :Analysis of farmer's welfare on implementing the Muzara'ah Contract in the Village of Sodo, Pakel Sub-district, Tulungagung District with the Maqashid Sharia approach

CONTENT :

Muzara'ah is the contract between farm workers and farm owners in which, cost of cultivations, seeds, and fertilizers are provided by the farm owners, meanwhile the farm workers have responsibility in giving their best efforts on cultivating the farmland. Later then, the harvest will be shared according to the contract that has been agreed.

Farmers in the village of Sodo have been implementing Muzara'ah contract for years. They have one farmers association that established by the local society, called KridoTani Farmers Association.

KridoTani Farmers Association play a role as mediator between farm workers and farm owners in fulfilling terms and conditions of the Muzara'ah Contract.

The purpose of this research is to describe farmer's welfare in the village of Sodo after implementing Muzara'ah Contract with the Maqashid Sharia approach. This research approach is qualitative descriptive and uses case study as its strategy. Informants in this research are administrator from KridoTani Farmers Association, The farm workers, and the farm owners. These informants determined by using purposive sampling technique. The data collection techniques are carried out through interview and direct observation.

According to the research, it was shown that agricultural cooperation with Muzara'ah Contract has a role in improving farm workers' welfare, viewed from the indicators of Maqasid Sharia.
