ABSTRACT

Antenatal care indicated in pregnant women not only when illness and need some treatment, but control and treatment of pregnant women to prevent abnormalities in pregnancy, so that mothers and children healthy and safe. Antenatal care is very important to ensure the pregnancy process, childbirth until post partum that could walk normally and healthy. The purpose of this study was to analyze the factors of pregnant women to antenatal care visits. This study is an observational study with a quantitative approach. This includes cross-sectional study with a sample of 54 respondents. The sampling technique used was simple random sampling. The independent variables in this study were age, parity, knowledge, education, attitude, completeness health facilities, family support and support health workers, while the dependent variables is antenatal care visits. The results of this research obtained through questionnaires and analyzed using the chi-square test for the presence of correlation between pregnant women to antenatal care visits. The results showed all the variables have a significant relationship to the antenatal care visit with a value of $\alpha = 0.5$.

Keywords: Behaviour, Pregnancy, Antenatal Care