ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First of all, to Allah SWT: no words could ever sufficiently express the gratitude for the time and ability that You bestow to this insignificant mortal...

To Dra. Sudar Itafarida, M.Hum., my thesis advisor, for the systematic and thorough counseling which I greatly appreciate;

To both of my parents for their on-site, moral and material support, without which I would not have come this far through one of the most crucial phases of life;

To my sibling Muhammad Ilham Adhim and all my other relatives, most notably my uncles Prof. Dr. dr. Edi Widjajanto, MS., SpPK (K) and Dr. Ir. Nugroho Ananto, M.Eng., MM for your unspoken prayers, tolerance, advices and motivations. We have supported each other until now and from now on;

To my friends and acquaintances in the English Department and beyond: we have been together through joyful and difficult times. Thank you for your capability to keep strong and understanding; it served well as reflection for myself. Hopefully we will continue to hear from each other again

And last but not least, to other parties concerned for any part they might have had to realize this work, I offer you all my sincerest thanks.

ABSTRACT

This thesis explores the denial issue as part of defense mechanism as a subcategory of Psychoanalysis theory, in The ODESSA File novel. The theory that is going to be used is Freudian Psychoanalysis, due to its explicit stress on the relations between sexuality and common human conduct compared to its other branches. As such, the object novel will mainly be analyzed qualitatively.

The steps involved concerning with the analysis involved close reading of the novel to find the primary issue for analysis, then research for journals, articles and other kinds of materials to support the analysis. The thesis begins with a brief overview of Psychoanalysis theory as a whole, as well as some of its primary tenets, before narrowing to those of Freudian. In the analysis part, it will further explore the instances of denial of Peter Miller (the novel's protagonist) in comparison with that of Alfred Oster—a member of an organization named ODESSA—before assessing the relations. In conclusion, the writer discovered that the instances of denial and trauma are closely intertwined and that both of which could in fact be resolved through apparently trivial means. The conclusions ended with some statements on the final state of relationships between the two parties, as well as some notions about neo-Nazism, a post-WWII ideology, as a prospective issue for future researches.

Keywords: Defense Mechanism; Trauma; Denial; Tripartite Model; 'Order';
