Dear:

Congratulations on the article "Human Rights Approach in Environment Law Enforcement Based on Law Number 32 of 2009" submitted to the journal Research, Society and Development. We believe that it will bring significant contributions to science.

The article came back from the review with some suggestions for improvements that are in the journal's system. In addition to following the suggestions of the reviewers, check the evidence of plagiarism through the CopySpider Software, available at <http://www.copyspider.com.br/main/>, and send us the report that shows that the article has a maximum of 3% similarity with other files (and justification if greater than 3%).

To facilitate the editing of the text, a file with the journal's template is also attached to the system. So, we wait for the article to be sent inside the template (already in the publication format), accompanied by the CopySpider report, if possible, until next week. Remember that the article must necessarily use the rules of the American Psychological Association (APA), and the ORCID link (of all authors) must be informed.

The inclusion of the files must occur by the system itself in Evaluation> Load Author Version (one file at a time).

We will not charge the DOI fee for this article.

Regards,
Research, Society and Development Team

Dear Editor,

Here I send the CopySpider report.
I also have sent the revised version through the online system.
I hope it meets your journal's requirements.
Thank you

Sincerely,
Lanny
