

SYNOPSIS

Benjamin has lost his wife and decides to start a new life. He used to be an adventure writer, but after his wife passed away, he loses his passion in doing it. He finds a house that has a zoo on the property. His young daughter is delighted about the idea and he goes ahead and purchases it. On the other hand, his son, Dylan, is not happy about it and retreats away to his artwork.

The zoo is in desperate need of renovation and the animals are also not well-cared by the previous owner such as Spar, the tiger, and Buster, the grizzly bear. Spar is the oldest tiger that cannot live any longer. Spar needs to be euthanized, but at the same time Benjamin cannot let Spar die. The next one is Buster, the grizzly bear. He had escape from the zoo headed to the extensive hill. Benjamin sets about the work with the head keeper, Kelly, and the rest of the zoo staff. They succeed to caught Buster and return him to his enclosure.

Dylan meets a new friend, Lilly. He has a crush on her, but he is oblivious. Dylan is in his bad condition. The only think he wants is go back to his old house. Dylan is delighted when Lilly tells him that his family may be moving due to the potential sale of the zoo. Lilly is upset by this.

The staffs become unhappy when they told by Rhonda that Benjamin has gone bust. They have been told that the zoo is in financial trouble and that the zoo may need to be sold. This news is still confusing, because Benjamin does not announce anything about this.

Benjamin discovers that his late wife has left him some money, and that he must 'follow his heart' in spending it. He decides to put the money into saving the zoo. The zoo staffs are delighted, but Dylan is angry at the prospect of staying. He argues with his father.

Benjamin gives Dylan understanding about living a new life. Both of them have a conversation and finally Dylan agreed to live in this new house. His father also advises him to reconcile with Lilly, because Lilly might feel a little bit upset about Dylan's removal. The next day Dylan confesses that he misses Lily. Dylan decides to tell Lily that he loves her.

The day of the zoo's grand re-opening arrives, but it is threatened by a huge rainstorm. Luckily they escape this, but still no visitors arrive. It turns out a tree has blocked people from gaining access to the zoo, so they think it is not open. Dylan and all of the staffs help the visitor to climb the collapse trees.

In the middle of crowd, when Kelly and Benjamin were looking for reserve ticket, Kelly confesses that she has feelings for Benjamin. They kiss and she suggests that they will do this again on New Year's Eve and Benjamin says he is looking forward to New Year.
