

SYNOPSIS

Caligula is a young the Roman Emperor. He is loosing from the empire without any notification, after the death of his sister and also his mistress, Drusilla. Since his loosing, his people continuously looking for him, but they get nothing. After three days he is back to the empire by himself. He is back with distracted face, dirty leg, tired and wet. By his loosing, he finds the truth that “men are dying and they are not happy” and becomes aware that the world is dissatisfactory. He sees suffering and unhappiness in the world. Hence, he needs for the moon or happiness or eternal life which will make him and his people happy. Thenceforth, he wants to be God for his people. He starts on a sadistic behavior to his people. He renews the new policies in treasury, he puts the treasury in the top of his priority in life and also in his state and human life are not worthed anymore. His ways are putting his people in the list of death in order to inherit his people’s wealth quickly. He arbitrarily closes the public granaries and declares a famine in all the Rome. He also collects money from the public brothel, he pushes his people to visit the public brothel. He is going to give Civil Merit to his people who hold the biggest record in visiting the brothel house and he is going to exile or execute for his people who does not visit the brothel house. He is also rapping the patricians’ wives, poisoning his people.

Caligula’s action can not accept by his people. His people plot some revenge against Caligula. The confrontation that leads by Cherea has been run for years. Cherea, patricians and the citizen set plot against Caligula. They wait until the time to revenge come. Then, they kill their emperor.