Dear Nur,

I apologise for the delay in replying to you about your revised manuscript.

I have checked the revisions and there is one issue to resolve and your article will then be ready to send to our Production team for publication:

Please refer to the underlying and extended data in the main text of the article using a citation as you have just included them at the end of the reference list. We usually suggest the methods or results section is the best place to refer to your underlying data. You could say 'Please see the underlying data^{xx}'. This means the citation numbers you have given the underlying and extended data will change. Please ensure the citation numbers remain in order in the main text.

When you return the revised manuscript please send it direct to me by replying to this email rather than creating a new submission.

I attach your revised manuscript and look forward to hearing from you shortly.

Best wishes,

Lisa

Dear Nur,

Thank you for providing your revised manuscript and figure.

I have now checked the revisions and I have a few further comments to make, as follows:

- When you submitted your manuscript you did not use a formal email address associated with your affiliation. Please can you provide a formal email address for Airlangga University?
- I have suggested some subheadings in the methods section you may wish to consider but please amend or delete them if you prefer.
- I have changed the wording in your competing interests statement; please make any amendments if required.
 - Please refer to the underlying data in the main text of the article using a citation, include the citation number in the Data availability section and add the citation to the references; Figshare provides an example of how to cite the data.
 - Please list the files stored in Figshare in the Data availability section.
- Please also upload a copy of the original trial protocol to your Figshare project or provide a link to the published trial protocol. Any deviation from the original trial protocol must be explained in the article.
- I have made some additional copy edits to the main text; please check you are happy with the amendments.

I attach the current version of your manuscript and look forward to hearing from you.

Best wishes,

Lisa
