Summary

Luna is a novel written by Julie Anne Peters tells about Teenager Transgender, named Liam O'Neill. He have sister named Regan who always help and keep his secret as transgender. Liam is an average senior student with a job making, programming and fixing computers alongside his best friend Alyson. Every night Liam always transforms in a girls named Lia Marie. Then, he changes his female name to Luna, which means "moon".

After pretend as a man and only dressed as woman in the night, Liam confides in Regan that he wants to transition in a real female. Liam asks Regan to help him in his transitioning process. Regan always worried with Liam's safety, because his parents and society can't accept people non-heterosexual.

Other problems arise for Liam and Regan, Regan as she attending high school always spent most of their life avoiding other student, because in fear of letting the secret slip.

Then, the other problems as Luna is coming out is their father start to notice differences in his son and tries to push a more masculine role onto Liam. Society in the novel, include Liam's father is didn't know about transgender. They confides that Liam is homosexual. In the other hand, their mother remains oblivious to the rising tension in the household. She always busy with her job as wedding planner, and she always out and distant from her family.

Even though Liam always get abuse from society and his family but he fight for his right to be the person she was meant to be. In the end of the story, Liam decided to leave his house and live his life as a truly woman she wants to be.
