

ABSTRACT

The Macneils of Tokyo is trilogy novel; The Macneils of Nagasaki and The Macneils of Yokohama which tell the story about the journey of Macneils's family open their business in Japan especially Nagasaki and Yokohama. Whereas, The Macneils of Tokyo telling the story about their participation during the World War II in Asia Pacific area. Jack Seward is one of the authors who specialized in Japan and its language. His efforts impressed the Japanese Government and awarded him the Order of the Sacred Treasure.

The Macneils of Tokyo was first published in 2000. The novel sets on Japan and China during World War II around 1941 until 1945. The novel portrays on the participant of Macneils family during World War II. Seward uses Sarah as one of the family members who join the war. She joins Japanese Army as her way to safe the Jews refugees in China pass the war safely.

The writer uses Atkinson's Theory of Achievement Motivation to analyze major characters affecting Sarah's motivation to help the Jews refugees finding a safe place for their settlement and her reaction against the threat of World War II and Nazi's 'final solution' for Jews refugees in Shanghai, China.

Trough the analysis, the writer finds that there are two major characters that affecting Sarah's motivation toward the Jews. They are Nathan Blum and Joseph Blum. These two characters give a huge contribution toward Sarah's motivation to build and to maintain Far East Zion 'FEZ' for the Jews refugees. Far East Zion 'FEZ' is the idea to save the Jew from World War II by building a settlement for the Jews refugees especially in Shanghai, China.

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION