

APPENDIX

Synopsis

The story begins when Laura and Pa go to Laura's new place to teach at Brewsters. The place is far away from her home about nineteen kilometres. Laura is not accepted by the family especially by Mrs. Brewster and her son. But Laura has to hang on with the situation because she needs the money to pay Mary's college. Every weekends she goes back home and Almanzo always ready to take her back and forth. After her school finish she likes to work more beside goes to school. Meanwhile, her relationship with Almanzo is growing. They like to ride together with Almanzo's buggy. At school Laura still be the number one among her friends and it increases Nellie Oleson's jealousy. She was Laura's friend since her childhood at Plum creek. But they never be good friends. And now the competition and jealousy change to Nellie's desire to get Almanzo's attention. During that time Laura who already earn her own living can afford to buy new clothes and many young men interested in her. But Laura still choose Almanzo and at spring they engaged. Laura teaches two other schools before she married in the autumn. The life of the Ingalls also becomes better, they have two houses, in the town and on their claim land. And they build their house with extra rooms, the farm also grows bigger with chicken and cows. The family can afford to buy things like organs and sewing machine. Almanzo too, builds a house for Laura on his claim land where trees grow above it. Laura and Almanzo married and lived there.

