

SYNOPSIS

Harry Potter became an orphan since he was a baby. His parents, James and Lily Potter, were killed by an evil wizard named Voldemort. Actually, Voldemort also wanted to kill Harry but mysteriously and magically, he could not, more over Voldemort lost his magical power. The miracle made Harry famous before he could understand what had happened to him. This situation forced Dumbledore, the Headmaster of Hogwarts and the greatest wizard of modern times, to put Harry away from the wizards' world to prevent him to become arrogant.

Since Harry did not have other family but his aunt, his mother's sister, Dumbledore left Harry in the front door of their house. Even though Dumbledore knew very well that his aunt hated Harry and his family. She hated Harry's family because her parents always boasted and praised Lily's gift on magic things.

As Dumbledore when he had to leave Harry on her house, Petunia Dursley, his aunt, did not have any choice when she found Harry on the front door. She and her husband had to raise Harry.

That was the start of Harry's miserable life since the Dursleys hated the Potter and the wizardry. They did not love and care him moreover they rejected and neglected him. They did not give him proper life facilities. They made Harry sleep in a tiny closet at the foot of the stairs while the Dursley's son, Dudley, had two nice rooms; one was for his bedroom and other was his toys room. They never bought him new thing, all his clothes, shoes and toys were Dudley's used.

The Dursleys never talked with tender or loving voice to Harry. They always yelled, “do this Harry!,” “shut up!,” “don’t ask question!,” “don’t do that or this,” “I warning you ..!,” or “go!,” “... no meal!”

If he did not want to do what they had asked, they would punish him to stay at his closet for many days or they would ask Dudley to poke him.

Even though Harry never knew that his parents and he him-self was a wizard, he had magical power that sometimes, out of his consciousness, rose suddenly and put him in trouble.

Once, aunt Petunia cut his hair so sort he was almost bald except for his bang. That haircut made Harry looked so silly but on the next morning he found his hair exactly as it had been before. Aunt Petunia was so upset that she sent Harry a week in his cupboard.

On the other time, he had gotten into terrible trouble for being found on the roof of the school kitchen. Dudley’s gang had been chasing him as usual when there he was suddenly sitting on the chimney. The Dursleys had received a very angry letter from the headmistress telling them that Harry had been climbing school building. But all he’d tried to do was jump behind the big trashcans outside the kitchen doors. For this, Harry once again, was locked in his cupboard.

They also restricted Harry’s social life because they afraid that some one would discover his special identity. And since Dudley hated Harry, no one at his school wanted to be his friend. So Harry was absolutely did not have somebody to talk and to share his feeling to. He was really lonely.

Those Dursleys' bad treatments made Harry lack self-confidence, a loner, and anxious easily. He always worried everything that he done would be displeased The Dursley and they would yell or punish him.

Sometime, when he was locked in his cupboard, Harry felt sad for his ten miserable years. He, oftenly, missed his parents and remembered his parents who as the Dursleys told him, died in car crash, or he wished that other relation would coming to take him away.

Harry's miserable live disappeared when on his eleventh birthday, he got a mail from Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry. From the carrier, Hagrid, he knew his real identity that he was a wizard and his parents were great wizards too. In fact he was famous on the wizard world and his parent left him a lot of money that enough for him to spend it to buy everything he wanted. All those things happened so suddenly that made Harry hard to believe. He even worried that all those 'new beautiful realities' were only some huge jokes that the Dursleys cooked up.

On the train that took Harry to Hogwarts, he met Ron Weasley, a tall, thin, and gangling boy, the youngest of Weasleys family, a poor wizard family with many children. He, then, became Harry's first friend along his life. At that time, he also met the clever Hermione Granger who made Harry worry that he would become the dummiest student in Hogwarts.

In Hogwarts, Harry saw, learnt, experienced, and practiced many magnificent things that had even never been crossed in his mind before. He had many new wonderful things that Dudley never had. He studied to change something into another things. And the most important was almost everybody accepted and threat him nicely.

With his new friends, Harry learnt how to appreciate and respect others. He also learnt how to share happiness and sadness with friends. In his friendship with Ron and Harmione, Harry also learnt to work hard and work together to solve a problem.

In his new environmental acceptance, Harry's behavior slowly changed and developed. Harry started to have self-confidence; his braveness slowly arose on the surface of his heart and he never worried about anything anymore because he already had power in his heart; confidence and love.