ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

It has been noted for a long time that Javanese language gave fruitfull aspect to research in terms of sociology as well as linguistic studies. Many experts did some research about Javanese in terms of sociolinguistic aspect in which they observed the Javanese language in relation with their society. But on the other hand, some linguistics discussed Javanese language within its structure. They just took a look at the pure linguistic approach such as phonology, morphology, syntax etc.

In this thesis the author tries to analyze the Javanese language using pure linguistic approach in which he eagerly deals with the study of bound morpheme reduplication of Surabaya Javanese dialect.

During the work on this thesis, the author was assisted by some person from the English Department of Airlangga University as well as the author's companions. Deep appreciation is given to them who contributed their ideas or help toward the authors thesis without their participation the author would not be able to finish his work.

Thanks are expressed to the Almighty God for His mercy and grace by which the author could finish his thesis without any significant obstacle. The author also gives thanks to the author's thesis counselor Ms. Ismari for her contribution of ideas and rechecking the thesis materials, without this, the author would not be able to present a reasonable explanation towards the topic. The author also wishes to express his gratitude to the author's academic counselor Mr. Rachman and the chief of Language Department of Airlangga University Mrs. Soemarto for their support. The author also wants to thank to his companions Hery Ratno B and Arphan Fahmi for his assistance and ideas during the thesis writing process.

Last but not least, the author owes great debt of gratitude to Mrs Rochayah for her contributions of idea and her criticism during the seminar class, without her participation this thesis would never be accomplished.
