

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION

After accomplishing the analysis of the story, the writer may conclude that Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde is a touchful story about a London physician who performs the experiment on him to unleash a sinister of his personality. In this story, the writer finds some important events concerning with the analysis of Dr. Jekyll's consciousness.

The reason of Dr. Jekyll's to be a different person can be seen since he finds a theory of man's dual nature. The theory encourages him to investigate more far about the unique of human's nature. The good and bad qualities in human's personality make him interesting and arise his scientific curiosity to perform the experiment. He wants to make a transcendental experiment that can bring a change in his life.

Dr. Jekyll's behavior shows how his consciousness is. The consciousness really influences his personality that is reflected in his behavior. We can see the change of his personality before he does the experiment and after he finishes it.

Before his experiment, Dr. Jekyll shows usual behavior and normal. His polite behavior and his moral values are quite kept by him. He can control his behavior and gives the good impression for the society around him. In this case, the respectable personality belongs to him.

The influence of consciousness toward Dr. Jekyll's personality becomes worse after he finishes his experiment. The uncontrollable Hyde's acts emerges his suffering and misery, which is to be his frustration. His disappointment and guilty feeling overpowers his hearth. He feels that he has made the disaster in the city. Committing suicide always comes in his mind and he has been bent in double quantity.

In his long suffering of life, Dr. Jekyll is conscious that what he has done is wrong. His willing to be able to control and enjoy both of opposite qualities, good and bad, in him is in vain. Even, the case leads his destruction. Finally, he dies by committing suicide in his great despair.

There are some lessons that we can depict from the analysis of Dr. Jekyll's consciousness. Those are if person is in consciousness, he can control his own behavior conforming to the ideas in his society and on the contrary, if person is in unconsciousness existence, everything does not correspond to any effort of the will of his society. So, what happened in Dr. Jekyll's personality shows an imbalance in his consciousness. As we know that the inner side of human being is always consist of two qualities, good and bad. We cannot avoid the condition, but we can try to be in balance.

We realize that the limit of good and bad is only a slice of screen. Therefore, human being can easily become a good one and a bad one. However, since we still keep our consciousness, we can handle it. If we did something wrong and then, we are aware of it, we would try to go back to the right line. That's what we call as a balance.

From Dr. Jekyll's act, we can also see that not all the mystery of life can be solved by scientifically. We cannot be escaped from the power of God. Human being is only the limited creature, and if human being tries to break up what God has given, so it would be the disaster, as what happened in Dr. Jekyll.
