ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This thesis is arranged to fulfill the requirement of the Sarjana degree at the English Departement, Faculty of Sosial and Political Sciences, Airlangga University, Surabaya . In particular it is about the characters presented in Eugene O'Neill's Mourning Becomes Electra(Christine Mannon) and Aeschilus' Oresteia (Clytemnestra). What is exactly going to be discussed here is about their roles as wives and mothers, the similarities as well as the dissimilarities between those two characters . This study is performed as a comparative study .

First of all, I thank God for He has given me strength and ability to finish this thesis . I also would like to all my teachers in English Departement, especially my advisor, Dra. Ny. S.F. Sumarto, M.Ed, for her great help and guidance during the writing of this thesis, and also Drs. Sumitro and Dra. S.E. Widjajati, M.S., who have spared much time to give me advice and support in accomplishing this thesis . I also appreciate the helps and supports from my best friends, Dina and Ririn, who have helped me to finish this work . And most of all, I thank my parents, brother, sister and also my beloved fiance for the courage and understanding which support me a lot .

Finally, I hope this thesis will be useful for us . As I realized that this thesis is not perfect for the data is limited . In relation, your criticism and advice will be appreciated .
