

ABSTRACT

The Effects of Social Economic Factors on Society's Poverty Through Public Accessibility in Buru Regency Maluku Province

Djunaidi Rupelu

This study is aimed to answer the questions : Does capital influences the social economic aspect of Buru Regency's population ? Does education influences the social economic aspect of Buru Regency's population ? Does health influences the social economic aspect of Buru Regency's population ? Does the social economic condition of Buru Regency's population influence market accesability? Does market accesability influence the poverty of Buru Regency's population ? Does poverty influences the social and economic aspects of Buru Regency's population ? Is the social economic condition influences the poverty of Buru Regency's population ? Is social economy influences the poverty of Buru Regency's population ?

The respondents interviewed are 150 heads of household. The data analysis is done by using AMOS 4.02 with significance level $\alpha = 0.05$.

From this study, it is found that : 1) Social economic factors that consist of capital ownership, education, health and culture have significant effects on the ability to access facilities; 2) Social economic factors that consist of capital ownership, education, health and culture have positive effects on poverty; 3) The limited access of bank, cooperation and market facilities have positive effects on the level of poverty; 4) There are indirect effects of capital, education, culture and health level condition through the limited access to bank, cooperation, and market facilities.

Keywords : capital, education, health, culture, limitation access facilities, poverty regency of Buru.