ABSTRACT

This research aims to obtain empirical evidence from the effect of tax avoidance and foreign ownership on transfer pricing. Tax avoidance is measured using CashETR, foreign ownership is measured by foreign shareholders divided by total outstanding shares and transfer pricing is measured using Related Party Transaction (RPT). Data is obtained from the official website www.idx.co.id. The sample used in this study was 313 samples from manufacturing companies listed on the Indonesia Stock Exchange in 2013-2017. The analysis of this study uses multiple linear regression methods with SPSS 20 software to see the effect of tax avoidance and foreign ownership on transfer pricing. The results showed that tax avoidance and foreign ownership had a positive effect on transfer pricing.
