SYNOPSIS

Several months after Percy Jackson's defense of Mount Olympus from Cronos in the book The Last Olympian, Percy finds himself alone and on the run from monsters in northern California without his memories. Under the initial guidance of Lupa, the wolf-goddess and protector of ancient Rome, he makes his way toward Camp Jupiter, the Roman demigod training camp. Upon arriving, he is attacked by two Gorgons and successfully defends a disguised goddess Juno with the help of the guards on duty. Having been protected by Percy during the attack, Juno announces Percy's arrival with blessing, identifying him as a son of Neptune. She tells him privately that he can only regain his memory by learning to be a hero again and successfully survive the challenges he encounters at camp.

He quickly befriends the guards, Frank Zhang, son of Mars; and Hazel Levesque, daughter of Pluto, and subsequently gets introduced to the praetor of the camp, Reyna, and the augur Octavian, who quickly takes a dislike to Percy. Being outcasts themselves at Camp Jupiter, Frank and Hazel empathize with Percy's outsider status and consider it their duty to help him adjust to the camp's routines and leadership. But before any of them has a chance to gain their footing, they are ordered to go on a quest to rescue Thanatos, the god of death, from the Giant Alcyoneus who is hiding deep in Alaska after receiving a direct prophecy from Mars, the Roman god of war:

On their journey, they encounter Phineas, the seer, and befriend a harpy named Ella that supposedly torments him.
